

ONE TERM ENRICHMENTS

ARCHITECTURE

Course Information: The architecture enrichment programme has been designed for students who have a keen interest in the creative arts, architecture, design and the built environment. No previous experience is necessary – just an open mind and willingness to explore ideas.

The programme will be structured around a research and design brief. You will be taken through a series of stages in which you will investigate architectural / design practices and what contributes towards successful design.

The majority of the lessons will be focused on developing ideas through drawing and mark-making, as well as workshops exploring practical activities, such as casting in plaster and constructing in metal and timber.

This is an exciting opportunity to develop a portfolio of work if you are considering applying for architecture / design at university.

The architecture enrichment programme provides a fun and supportive environment for you to develop and explore your creativity. Lots of group work, discussion and sharing ideas!

ARCHAEOLOGY

Course Information: Interested in the past but bored with History? Want to know about things which happened a really long time ago? Then this is the course for you! We'll be getting to grips with British Archaeology from the Palaeolithic onwards but branching out to take in developments elsewhere in the world like the development of farming in the Middle East, the nature of the Mayan city states of Mexico and the light which archaeology can shed on the peopling of the USA. There will be presentations, documentaries and perhaps even a visit to the Archaeology Department at Cambridge University. You'll learn not just about what archaeologists have discovered about the past, but how they have done it. Want to know more about the Vikings? Interested in learning about some of the great archaeologists? Then sign up for Archaeology!

BAD SCIENCE

Course Information: This course is inspired by Ben Goldacre's Bad Science book and columns for The Guardian, in which he analyses research evidence and the presentation of science in the media. We will analyse scientific and social scientific research in a variety of subject areas: health & medicine, psychology, politics, business, etc. We will consider some controversial issues that have featured in the media in recent years, including:

- How do we know whether drug treatments work?
- Why were the general election polls so wrong?
- Does homeopathy work?
- What makes a good business?
- Are 50% of positive research findings actually wrong?
- Why should you avoid the Daily Mail's coverage of cancer research?
- What can a dead salmon teach us about brain scans?
- Why does anyone believe that MMR caused autism?

Along the way you'll learn how to analyse evidence and arguments critically, develop skills in spotting bad science and identify many examples of human stupidity.

Who will this enrichment suit / not suit?

Suitable for anyone interested in how science works (or doesn't work!), in critically assessing claims Made in controversial areas of research and the presentation of scientific findings in the media

HILLSFEST LEADERSHIP & EVENT MANAGEMENT

Course information: This course focusses on the management of two of the biggest activity days within the college calendar, the HR4.5 Charity Fun Run, which takes place shortly before Easter, and HillsFest at the end of June.

2017 marks the 10th anniversary of the HR4.5 Fun Run and we aim to make this year the biggest and best ever, with a target to raise £10,000 for Teenage Cancer Trust. Part of your role, under staff supervision, will be to organise the promotion and fund-raising for this event and to manage the day effectively.

On HillsFest day at the end of June, all students are off-timetabled and are asked to choose three activities to attend. These will be an hour long each and designed to get everyone involved in trying or learning something new. Your role here will be to create and organise the HillsFest programme and, again, manage the day effectively.

Most of your time organising these events will be during your HillsFest/HR4.5 Enrichment session (Tuesday 4-5pm) but there will be additional time required running up to and on the days of the events themselves, including essential weekly tasks. If you are able to make this level of commitment, you should definitely consider this Enrichment.

As part of the organising committee for these two events you will develop a wide range of skills including day to day event management, publicity and marketing, large scale organisation of over 1000 students and much more.

The course will provide a host of opportunities to develop many of the essential vocational skills important to university admissions tutors and employers such as; effective communication to groups of people, time and resource management, teamwork, confidence and capability in leading others and group performance evaluation. The Events Management course also provides the chance to work with your peers and offers volunteering opportunities within the college and the wider community or even a potential EP project! Above all it's great FUN!

MINDFULNESS

Course Information: Mindfulness means paying attention in a particular way, in the present moment, on purpose, non-judgmentally. This course is an introduction to the practice of mindful awareness, and is based upon the Mindfulness Based Stress Reduction (MBSR) approach. It is not a therapy-based or counselling course, nor is it meditation. Mindfulness is, however, based on the principles of meditative reflection, and many people who practice regularly have found it very effective in dealing with symptoms of stress, anxiety and negative thinking. The course will introduce you to some of the basic techniques for mindful practice; the extent to which you benefit will depend entirely on the amount of practice you do in your own time. Each session will involve a review of your experiences of the previous week's practice, the introduction of a new technique and some mindfulness practice. Practice will generally involve sitting or lying quietly, eyes closed, listening to a guided meditation. Loose clothing is preferable but not essential, shoes will be taken off and you must be comfortable with sitting or lying still for extended periods of time.

PSYCHOLOGY

Course Information: Psychology is the study of people – how they think, act, react and interact. Psychologists study human behaviour, experience and mental processes, largely using scientific methods such as the laboratory experiment.

The purpose of this course is to give you a flavour of the many different theoretical approaches to understanding people and of the variety of research methods which psychologists use. You will have plenty of opportunities to discuss and debate your ideas, to carry out your own research and to watch relevant videos, including footage of some classic psychological studies.

Topics will include: Social psychology – would you electrocute a stranger? Conditioning – can studying pigeons help us to understand gambling and superstition? Sigmund Freud’s strange ideas – the Oedipus complex and the anal personality. Twin studies and the nature nurture debate. Designing a questionnaire – do men and women look for different things in a partner? Happiness – what effect has affluence had and can psychology help us to be happier?
